

THE WATCH-DOG OF ALEPPO

It isn't in the frozen regions of the Arctic Circle and the dangerous passes of the Alps that dogs are heroes. From Aleppo, Syria, comes the story of a watch-dog who, by his cleverness and devotion, saved the lives of a whole family of Armenian children when the city was besieged by the Turkish Nationalists last winter.

The story comes from Mr. George C. Doolittle, Director of Aleppo for the Near East Relief, which is operating among the destitute Armenians and Syrians of Asia Minor. His letter, just received at the New York headquarters, of the organization, reads as follows:

"Old Bill, one of the two large watch-dogs at the Aleppo garage, and faithful as large, has become a distributor of general relief. Some time ago Said, our night watchman, father of a large and increasing family, had come to the end of his provisions and knew not where he should procure the next meal. That evening Bill stalked into the yard and laid at the feet of the watchman a somewhat battered but very welcome tin of meat. Where he found it nobody knows, probably at a nearby camp. But his contribution was the saving of the day for Said's family, and since then Bill has been elected to the staff of the Near East Relief, honorary but very active member."

DISABLED VET SINGS IN THREE VOICES AT ONCE

Washington, June 30.—The federal board for vocational education has discovered a man whose vocation, apparently, is to be chorus all by himself. He is Joseph Kaufman, disabled veteran, and is able, the board's announcement asserts, "to sing in three voices at one time," sounding like three men side by side singing in unison. Only one similar case has ever been known in the United States.

Kaufman is described also as "an accomplished and versatile saxophone player," and has been placed in a Minneapolis school of music to prepare for a career in vaudeville.

SENATE TO FOLLOW HOUSE LEADERSHIP

Washington, June 30.—The senate will quickly follow the action of the house in so repairing the original Volstead act that doctors will be denied the right of prescribing beer for patients if they should think such prescribing necessary.

The fight in the senate will be short. The fight in the house was an old fashioned prohibition struggle in which the throb of the tomtom was again resorted to. Men displayed their passions and their weaknesses. Great statesmen who spend hours each day hunting a drink loudly voted beer to its doom. Men who on that sultry afternoon would have gladly paid $10 for a cold bottle of Budweiser did not hesitate a minute about casting their ballots.

Representative Tillman, of Arkansas made the most typical prohibition speech. He based his argument on the alleged disinclination of Irishmen to subscribe to the theories and practices of prohibition. "I love the Irish," he said, "but grow sad at heart when I see them asking for this German brew of hell."

The prohibition masters sat in the gallery. Representative Hill of Maryland pointed out Wayne B. Wheeler, counsel for the Anti-Saloon League of America and referred to him as the attorney paid $50,000 per annum by John D. Rockefeller. The prohibitionists in the house stood on their legs and loudly applauded their strategist.

When the bill was finally passed, there was a remarkable demonstration by the victors. They proceeded as if the millinium had been restored, and all the troubles of the world dissipated forever. The only notable speech against the bill was made by Representative Cochran of New York. It was not answered, but, nevertheless, was entirely futile.

Southern statesmen voted for the bill to the man.

The senate will be more sedate. Senators who oppose prohibition regard it as an additional enforcement measure and will support it, in all likelihood.

Marco Polo was the first European traveler to speak of Japan and he called it Cipango.
